

Grant Assurance Accountants with knowledge of grants

Sometimes you need an accountant for a grant

Even though it is not always obvious, in most cases you will need an accountant for the finalization of your grant project. While this may not directly seem so, grants are quite complicated as they usually involve a large amount of money. As a result, the grant provider wants everything to be well arranged and sorted out. One of the most common rules is that you will have to be able to prove that the budgeted money was actually used for its initial intentions. That is where the accountant steps in.

The moment of truth: your final declaration

One of the most important moments is your final declaration. After successfully executing a project, it is time to declare your final expenses. In most cases, you will need to send an audit report along with the rest of the declaration argumentation.

An accountant with knowledge of grants?

That's a bonus!

Most grants require an audit report once it exceeds a certain threshold. Once this is the case, an accountant will, before proving a statement, check the entire grant declaration to make sure nothing is missing and there are no irregularities. The type of grant requires specific knowledge from the accountant. In other words: an accountant with knowledge of grants knows the requirements of a sufficient grant declaration, and can, therefore, work more quickly and efficiently. The accountant uses criteria prepared in advance to test whether your final declaration adheres to the requirements set by law.

Grant Assurance

Every grant program is unique and has its own set of rules governed by law. This also counts for the final check by the accountant. At Grant Assurance, we work with certified accountants and specialists only, who, as part of the PNO Group, provide grants and run checks on a daily basis. Hence, Grant Assurance ensures that the entire audit process is executed in an efficient way. Our specialists know all the ins and outs of the requirements of the grant scheme, ensuring the entire process to run smoothly. Besides having a lot of control experience, our specialists also have years of experience with managing and supervising grant processes.
